Overview

This overview provides information about the major municipal borrowers in the State of Connecticut and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and their bond programs. The borrowers described in this guide include some of the most established and recognized issuers in the municipal market, as well as issuers of bonds under programs that have been established more recently. They reflect the largest and most active issuers in the two states, and encompass various types of debt. In many cases, a single borrower may issue debt under multiple programs that are each repaid with a different revenue source; most of the significant active bond programs are covered for these borrowers. While underlying ratings are shown, individual series or maturities within each of the bond programs may be insured and may not have underlying ratings.

Introduction

This introduction is intended to provide an overview of the long-term economic and fiscal developments taking place in the State of Connecticut and in the Commonwealth Massachusetts. Several factors are weighed and counterbalanced when determining these long-term trends. In terms of the economy, unemployment, job creation, and industry diversity are considered. Trends in the tax base are examined by looking at per capita income, tax burden, and shifts in adjusted gross income into and out of the two states. Finally, trends in the states’ fiscal positions are presented in terms of liabilities and reserves.

Of the 50 state economies, Connecticut and Massachusetts rank 1st and 2nd largest, respectively, as measured by per capita personal income from all industries. While both state economies have seen earnings from the finance and insurance industry contribute to a larger than average share of the total, Massachusetts has been more successful at diversifying its economy away from this historically more volatile sector. The last year in which the two states had the same contribution from finance and insurance was 1969. In recent years, Connecticut’s peaked in 2010 at 19% and declined to 15% in 2019, while Massachusetts’ peaked the same year at 13% and was 10% in 2019, compared to 7% nationally. The measure of the states’ overall economic diversity may be derived using the Hachman Index. This is an index of similarity that measures how closely industry earnings of the subject region (Connecticut or Massachusetts) resembles that of the reference region (United States). The value of the index is between zero and one. As the value of the index approaches one, this means that the subject region's employment distribution among industries is more similar to that of the reference region. If the reference region is the nation, and, given the assumption that the nation's economy is diversified, a larger Hachman Index value means that a subject region is more diversified (and therefore less specialized). In 2019, both Connecticut and Massachusetts had a Hachman Index value of 0.88, indicating that both states were near the middle of the distribution, which is described by a median of 0.88 for all states. Both states have experienced a decline in the share of income earned from the manufacturing sector since the 1950s, when that was the largest sector for the two states and significantly above the nation as a whole. In 2019, Connecticut’s retained manufacturing industry at 11% was still above the national average of 9%, while in Massachusetts that sector represented less than the average at 7%. Service industries have displaced manufacturing as drivers of personal income growth, although more so in Massachusetts than in Connecticut. The finance and insurance and the manufacturing sectors were the largest in terms of personal income from non-government sectors in Connecticut, although healthcare was a close third, while professional services and healthcare were the largest in Massachusetts.

The charts on the following page illustrate the trends in the states’ economic diversity (Hachman Index), and in the four largest non-government sector industries in terms of personal income in 2019.
Connecticut had a lower unemployment rate than Massachusetts in nearly three-quarters of all years from 1976 to 2009, but in the 10 years since Connecticut’s has been higher – a development that may indicate that structural changes in certain private employment sectors have occurred between the two states since 2009. However, prior to 2009, in years around national economic recessions Massachusetts’ unemployment rate increased at a faster pace than Connecticut’s. The most recent data on state unemployment rates may be indicating that this seemingly dormant trend has reasserted itself. For the month of April 2020 Connecticut’s preliminary unemployment rate was reported at 7.9% compared to 15.1% for Massachusetts.

Another measure of employment health comes from the Census Bureau’s Longitudinal Business Database (LBD), which contains the results of a census of business establishments and firms in the U.S. The census includes measures of establishment openings and closings, firm startups, job creation and destruction by firm size, age, and industrial sector, and several other statistics on business dynamics. One such measure is the net job creation rate, which takes into account gross job creation and gross job destruction figures within a year’s period, in order to find net job creation rates among businesses of all sizes within each state. Like all aggregate economic statistics, the net job creation rate is not without its flaws, as it fails to capture the quality of jobs being destroyed and created. However, it may be useful in assessing the general trend of business dynamism within a state. The net job creation rates for Connecticut and Massachusetts averaged 1.51% and 1.73%, respectively, in the 32-year period ending 2008. However, from 2009 through the most current year of the survey (2016), Connecticut’s annual average net job creation rate dropped to approximately 0.30%, while the annual average rate for Massachusetts was 1.04% (this survey is released on a two-year delay, but the 2017 data has been delayed further due to survey methodological changes and will not be released until fall 2020).

The unemployment rate and net job creation statistics may indicate that Massachusetts has maintained a more dynamic business climate, one that has enabled the state to better adjust to changes taking place in the broader economy and better suited to take advantage of any structural labor market changes that have taken place since 2008.

The charts on the following page illustrate the trend in the states’ unemployment and net job creation rates.

Connecticut and Massachusetts are wealthy states, having ranked first and second highest in per capita personal income (PCPI) in 2019, respectively. Connecticut had experienced an upward sloping trend in PCPI when compared to the nation until it peaked at 153% in 2010. Since then it has declined and held near 140% for the five years through 2019. The upward trend in Massachusetts’ PCPI has been more consistent, having ended at 132% relative to the nation in 2019, or at its highest level since at least 1977. The recent trend in PCPI for the two states narrowed the gap to 7 percentage points, or the smallest difference since at least 1977.

In 2019, the two states’ state personal tax burden was very close to the national median. The state personal tax burden is calculated by taking total state tax revenue excluding corporate income and severance taxes divided by total state personal income excluding federal transfer receipts. Importantly, the state personal tax burden does not include local taxes such as property taxes. Connecticut residents were subject to a 6.9% state personal tax burden and Massachusetts residents to a 6.5% rate; the 2019 median for U.S. states was 6.5%. Connecticut’s state personal tax burden increased substantially from the late 1970s through the mid 1990s and has generally been more volatile than Massachusetts’, which has exhibited a generally downward trend since the mid 1990s along with the national median.

Higher living costs and changing demographics in the two states may be pressuring their tax bases, which have exhibited outmigration in terms of shifts in adjusted gross income (AGI). Looking solely at changes in a state’s population may provide limited value in this regard because it does not directly measure changes in the tax base. Rather, the migration of AGI between and among the states provides a more accurate measure of the trend in a state’s tax base. The Statistics of Income Division of the IRS maintains records of all individual income tax forms filed in each year, including the state of residence of the filers. The data used to produce the migration statistics come from individual income tax returns and represent between 95% and 98% of total annual filings. One gauge of the degree of movement in a state’s tax base is the extent to which it is on the sending or receiving end of AGI migration. The net dollar flow of AGI between Connecticut and Massachusetts and other states, as well as the number of inflows received from and outflows sent to every other state, provide a good indication of how the two states’ tax bases are changing. Since the 1992-1993 period, growth in the tax base for Massachusetts has kept the net dollar flow of AGI within a range of -1.0% and -0.2% of the tax base. For the most recent 2017-2018 period the net dollar flow of AGI as a percent of the tax base for Massachusetts was -0.5%, close to its long-term average of -0.4%. For Connecticut, the most recent figure was -0.7%, which was also at the average -0.7%. Additionally, for the most recent period the states lost part of their tax bases to 41 and 32 other states, respectively – meaning that Connecticut had a net inflow from only 9 states, and Massachusetts was more evenly balanced with a net inflow from 18. The charts on the following pages illustrate the trend in the states’ per capita personal income, state personal tax burden, and tax base.

Connecticut’s and Massachusetts’ wealthy tax bases have enabled the states to support large debt burdens. Total net tax supported debt (NTSD) of $23.7 billion in Connecticut and $43.1 billion in Massachusetts rank them 6th and 3rd highest among states, respectively. At 8.4% and 8.3% of personal income their NTSDs rank 2nd and 3rd, respectively, and significantly above the 2.0% U.S. state median. Part of the explanation for their high debt levels may be attributed to the financing of projects that in other states are financed at the local level. Nevertheless, their debt burdens are high in addition to having large unfunded pension system liabilities. Connecticut’s Moody’s adjusted net pension liability (ANPL) was $62.1 billion in 2018. Massachusetts’ ANPL was $81.2 billion. Neither state has a history of maintaining strong pension funding levels, although both have enacted recent reforms even though material near-term progress is not expected. Going forward, both states have committed to fully funding their actuarially required contribution (ARC) amounts. Most states do not annually set aside 100% of their other post employment benefits (OPEB) ARC, and Connecticut and Massachusetts are not different in this respect. Both states have incurred substantial OPEB commitments, with Connecticut’s Moody’s adjusted net OPEB liability (ANOL) at $19.9 billion and Massachusetts’ at $16.0 billion. Taken together with NTSD and ANPL, total liabilities represented 38.9% of Connecticut’s state GDP and 24.6% of Massachusetts’ state GDP.

One measure of a state’s financial flexibility is its unrestricted reserves and rainy-day fund balances. At fiscal year end 2019, Connecticut had unrestricted reserves in its general fund of negative $771 million, and a committed rainy-day fund balance of $2.5 billion; the combined balance equated to 9.4% of general fund expenditures, the highest level since at least 1995. Massachusetts had unrestricted reserves in its general fund of $2.0 billion, and a committed rainy-day fund balance of $3.4 billion, resulting in a combined balance of 14.0% of general fund expenditures, which was the highest level since 2007.

The charts on the following page illustrate the trend in the states’ NTSD and reserve levels.

Purpose
- The District developed the Clean Water Project (CWP) in order to address a consent decree with the State Department of Environmental Protection, Department of Justice and US Environmental Protection Agency by 2029. The District implemented the Clean Water Project Charge (formerly Special Sewer Service Surcharge) in fiscal 2008 in anticipation of issuing debt specifically for the CWP.

Security
- The bonds are secured by a gross revenue pledge of the District's dedicated Clean Water Project Charge revenues, including transfers from the Rate Stabilization Fund. The charge is applied to the water bill of property owners that utilize any of the District's services for sewage collection, treatment, and disposal. The District has the legal authority to raise the charge without limitation.

Bonds Outstanding
- $232 million as of December 31, 2018

Anticipated Borrowing
- The estimated cost of the CWP is $2.4 billion. District voters approved two $800 million referendums (in 2006 and 2012) for the CWP, and another $800 million referendum is expected to go to voters sometime in 2020-2023. The District plans to fund remaining CWP costs through state revolving fund loans, state and federal grants, and, to a lesser extent, revenue bonds.

Debt Service Reserve Fund
- None.
Additional Bonds Test

- Additional bonds are permitted to be issued on parity with the existing outstanding bonds as long as Pledged Revenues during either of the two prior fiscal years are equal to at least 120% of aggregate annual debt service on all outstanding bonds for such fiscal year. Pledged Revenues may be adjusted to reflect any subsequently adopted increases in the Clean Water Project Charge as if such charges had been in effect from the beginning of such fiscal year.

Rate Covenant

- The District has covenanted to set the Clean Water Project Charge sufficient to produce gross revenues equal to at least 120% of debt service. After debt service on the bonds is paid, residual revenues are deposited in the Rate Stabilization Fund where they are legally available to pay debt service on any debt issued to fund the CWP as well as capital expenses for the CWP. The District can make transfers from the Rate Stabilization Fund to pay debt service in any period of up to 35% of debt service on the bonds; these transfers can be included as revenue to meet the rate covenant. Clean Water Project Charge revenues and transfers from the Rate Stabilization Fund to pay debt service are together referred to as Pledged Revenues.

- The Primary Bond Coverage Ratio, Revenue Available for Debt Service divided by Senior Debt Service, can not be less than 1.1. In addition, no adjustment can cause the Combined Debt Service Coverage Ratio, the sum of the Primary Bond Coverage Ratio and the Supplemental Bond Coverage Ratio defined as Revenue Available for Debt Service divided by Total Debt Service, to be less than 1.2. The Authority plans to eliminate the Supplemental Bond Coverage Requirement.

Additional Bonds Test

- These requirements do not need to be met for Bonds issued to refund other Bonds as long as debt service is not increased, and the latest maturity date of secured Bonds is not extended. Upon the issuance of Bonds for refunding purposes or otherwise, the Debt Service Reserve Fund must be fully funded.

Security, cont.
- Each borrower is obligated to repay the principal amount of its loan at a subsidized interest rate of 2% or less. The Trust has the right to intercept local aid payments made by the Commonwealth to a city or town in the event the specific municipality fails to make payments.

- In addition to matching funds, the Commonwealth provides assistance payments to the Trust on behalf of each borrower. The obligation is a general obligation of the Commonwealth in which the State’s full faith and credit are pledged. Payments are made during the first twenty years of the Bond’s term.

Debt Service Reserve Fund
- Each series has its own Reserve Fund which is required to initially equal between 33% and 50% of the original principal. (Except for the 2004 refunding Bonds which will be maintained at 10%)

- Pool SRF Bonds are further secured by the Pool Program Reserve Fund and all SRF Bonds are further secured by the Deficiency Fund.

- On each day the Trust pays down the principal, the Reserve Fund is reduced proportionally. As amounts are released from each Reserve Fund securing a series of Pool SRF Bonds, together with amounts released from the other revolving Bond funds which were refunded in part by Pool SRF Bonds, the amounts are transferred to the Pool Program Reserve Fund. Amounts not required to be used or held in such fund are immediately transferred to the Deficiency Fund.

Anticipated Borrowings
- None specified.

The Deficiency Fund secures all SRF Bonds issued by the Trust and receives released funds from the individual reserve funds—the MWRA SRF Bond Fund, the SESD SRF Bond Fund, and the New Bedford SRF Bond Fund.

As borrowers pay down the principal balances of their loan, and as the Trust pays principal on its SRF Bonds, proportional amounts are released from reserves pledged to secure the related SRF Bonds and are returned to the Trust. The released funds are used to establish new reserve funds for SRF Bonds or for the Trust’s eligible purposes. The amounts released from the reserve fund are transferred to the pool program reserve fund and then to the deficiency fund.
