Business Cycle Update: Global Economy in a Mature Expansion

United States
- The U.S. is firmly in the late-cycle phase but with low near-term risk of recession.
- The late cycle typically is characterized by tight labor markets, challenged corporate profit margins, less accommodative monetary policy, a flattening yield curve, and tighter credit conditions.
- Consistent with late-cycle dynamics, the U.S. consumer backdrop remains strong amid a low unemployment rate, accelerating wage growth, and manageable financial obligations.
- Corporate earnings growth has decelerated due largely to wage pressure, weak global demand, and a fading boost from the 2018 tax changes.
- The policy backdrop is highly uncertain, with the direction of monetary and trade policies unclear.

Global
- Global growth remains positive but has become more uneven, and many major economies have progressed toward more advanced stages of the business cycle.
- China’s entrance into a growth recession in 2018 continues to weigh on industrial sectors in Europe and other export-oriented economies.
- China’s policymakers have stepped up the pace of fiscal and monetary stimulus measures, which appears to have begun stabilizing the country’s growth trajectory.
- Overall, global activity appears to have passed its peak, and it remains to be seen whether China’s policy actions will prove sufficient to incite a sustained domestic and global reacceleration.

Asset allocation outlook
- Consistent with a maturing business cycle, asset-class patterns may become less reliable, warranting smaller cyclical tilts and prioritizing portfolio diversification.
- Meanwhile, low U.S. recession risk implies it’s too early to have high conviction in the likelihood of extremely bearish scenarios.
- The less hawkish posture of the U.S. Federal Reserve since the beginning of 2019 has provided some relief for financial conditions, but monetary policy and the global liquidity backdrop remain much tighter than they were two years ago.
- Overall, we expect the late-cycle environment to provide more volatility and a less favorable risk-return profile for asset markets than during recent years.

Business Cycle Framework
The business cycle, which is the pattern of cyclical fluctuations in an economy over a few years, can influence asset returns over an intermediate-term horizon. Cyclical allocation tilts are only one investment tool, and any adjustments should be considered within the context of long-term portfolio construction principles and strategic asset allocation positioning.

Note: The diagram above is a hypothetical illustration of the business cycle. There is not always a chronological, linear progression among the phases of the business cycle, and there have been cycles when the economy skipped a phase or retraced an earlier one. Source: Fidelity Investments (AART), as of Feb. 28, 2019.
BUSINESS CYCLE UPDATE: GLOBAL ECONOMY IN A MATURE EXPANSION

Information provided in this document is for informational and educational purposes only. To the extent any investment information in this material is deemed to be a recommendation, it is not meant to be impartial investment advice or advice in a fiduciary capacity and is not intended to be used as a primary basis for you or your client’s investment decisions. Fidelity and its representatives may have a conflict of interest in the products or services mentioned in this material because they have a financial interest in them, and receive compensation, directly or indirectly, in connection with the management, distribution, and/or servicing of these products or services, including Fidelity funds, certain third-party funds and products, and certain investment services.

Information presented herein is for discussion and illustrative purposes only and is not a recommendation or an offer or solicitation to buy or sell any securities. Views expressed are as of March 2019, based on the information available at that time, and may change based on market and other conditions. Unless otherwise noted, the opinions provided are those of the authors and not necessarily those of Fidelity Investments or its affiliates. Fidelity does not assume any duty to update any of the information.

Investment decisions should be based on an individual’s own goals, time horizon, and tolerance for risk. Nothing in this content should be considered to be legal or tax advice, and you are encouraged to consult your own lawyer, accountant, or other advisor before making any financial decision.

Investing involves risk, including risk of loss.

Past performance is no guarantee of future results.

Diversification and asset allocation do not ensure a profit or guarantee against loss.

Third-party marks are the property of their respective owners; all other marks are the property of FMR LLC.

The Chartered Financial Analyst (CFA) designation is offered by the CFA Institute. To obtain the CFA charter, candidates must pass three exams demonstrating their competence, integrity, and extensive knowledge in accounting, ethical and professional standards, economics, portfolio management, and security analysis, and must also have at least four years of qualifying work experience, among other requirements.

If receiving this piece through your relationship with Fidelity Institutional Asset Management® (FIAM), this publication may be provided by Fidelity Investments Institutional Services Company, Inc., Fidelity Institutional Asset Management Trust Company, or FIAM LLC, depending on your relationship.

If receiving this piece through your relationship with Fidelity Personal & Workplace Investing (PWI) or Fidelity Family Office Services (FFOS), this publication is provided through Fidelity Brokerage Services LLC, Member NYSE, SIPC.

If receiving this piece through your relationship with Fidelity Clearing and Custody Solutions® or Fidelity Capital Markets, this publication is for institutional investor or investment professional use only. Clearing, custody, or other brokerage services are provided through National Financial Services LLC or Fidelity Brokerage Services LLC, Members NYSE, SIPC.

© 2019 FMR LLC. All rights reserved.

878041.1.0